49 (SPLIT A) (OBAMA BACK FROM BRINK)
This past winter our nation was facing the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression, 700,000 jobs were being lost per month and our financial system was on the verge of collapse. We still have a long way to go and we will not rest until those Americans who seek jobs can find them, but thanks to the bold and decisive actions we have taken since January, we have pulled this economy back from the brink. ....

When President Obama was sworn in, almost 750 thousand Americans were losing their job every month. The actions we've taken have cut that number by two-thirds, so we've made progress in stemming the loss of jobs. But we are not satisfied and a jobless recovery isn't good enough for us or the American people; that is why we won't stop fighting until our economy is once again creating high quality jobs. ....
