¹ This survey included an oversample of 100 voters in congressional districts held by Democrats considered to be the most vulnerable in 2010.

² Likely voters are defined as those 2008 voters who voted or were not eligible in 2006 AND are almost certain to vote, probable to vote, or don't know if they will vote in 2010.

³ Drop-off voters are defined as those 2008 voters who are not likely voters.

Q.9 I know it is a long way off, but what are the chances of your voting in the election for Congress this November: are you almost certain to vote, will you probably vote, are the chances 50-50, or don't you think you will vote?

	Total	Likely Voters	Drop-Off Voters

64 (SPLIT A) When the economy crashed, banks, business and consumers held on for dear life - and only the government could get the economy moving, just as FDR had done in the Great Depression. And it is still true, with unemployment over 9 percent. We need to act now to put people to work and help those who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own. We need government investment in jobs, education, and infrastructure in the short-term while being mindful of reducing the deficit over the long-term.

65 (SPLIT B) We have a budget deficit, but the fact is we also have a massive public investment deficit - in roads, sewers, schools, trains, renewable energy, and other basic parts of our communities. To be competitive, we need to rebuild the infrastructure that is vital to our economy. This will create jobs, help business compete, improve our communities and generate revenues that can help pay down the budget deficit.....

That economy was based on personal debt, the housing bubble, trade deficits, stagnant wages, and a growing gap between CEOs and the rich, and everyone else. We have to build an economy on a new foundation by investing in education and training, in 21st century infrastructure, capturing a lead role in the new green industrial revolution, and balancing our trade so we make products and create jobs in America.....

67 (SPLIT B) Reducing the deficit is very important to our future economy and preserving critical public benefits for ordinary people, like teachers and police, Social Security and Medicare. We can reduce the deficit by cleaning up what got us into this mess. Restore the higher tax rates for those earning over 250 thousand dollars a year and for excessive CEO bonuses, institute a small transaction tax on stock trades, and wipe out the lobbyist-created special corporate subsidies. That is the right way for us.....
